

INSTRUCTOR: MS. GREENE

COURSE: SPANISH HERITAGE 1

PROJECT SUMMARY

- Students are looking at traditional dishes that reflect a country and their practices. They can either create video tutorial where they demonstrate how to prepare traditional dishes from their native countries or create a podcast that explores the gastronomy and wellness practices of their native countries, interviewing experts, sharing recipes, and discussing cultural aspects.

DRIVING QUESTION

- How do the gastronomy and wellness practices of our native countries reflect the essence of our culture, and how can we share this knowledge with our community?

SUSTAINED INQUIRY & AUTHENTICITY

- Students will reflect on the products, practices, and perspectives of their cultures. By making healthy choices and sharing information about our individual cultures with others students will be able to better citizens living in our diverse world.

STUDENT VOICE & CHOICE WITH PUBLIC PRODUCTS

- The videos/ podcasts can be posted on school social media sites.

TEACHER REFLECTION

- These projects were really great this year! I edited the requirements and rubric to be more specific and the students did an excellent job. Some students cooked at home and brought food into share and others made their videos with the playdoh. All and all it was a success and I look forward to teaching it again next year!

STUDENT REFLECTIONS

- "I learned a lot about a person's health in general, which is something I was not expecting in Spanish class."
- "I saw how fat and calories and cholesterol affects a person's body."
- "It was fun being able to use play-doh to create the fake food with, and I was able to showcase my personality and creativity with the commentary I included in the videos."
- "I learned how to edit videos a little better and faster than in projects before. Since these how-to tutorials were basically modeled off of viral social media trends, it let us play with a different editing style and different programs that usual. Seeing everyone's video also made it fun."
